

The Relationship Between Isms

The destructive isms that pervade our society are numerous and varied. However, they are worth thinking about and strategizing how to deal with in order to mitigate their impact on your relationship with students and with student relationships with one another.

Think about your own school and consider which isms you feel are most destructive to your students and their success. In the graphic organizer, notate your ideas and strategize ways that you can help diminish the impact these isms may be having.

Take some time to look at this list of isms provided in this article:

- The Relationship Between Isms

Ism	Inherent Bias in the ism	How does it impact my students?	What I can do to help diminish its impact?